Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bishop held a reception at the Cairo last night to meet Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Mich. The guests were received in the Chinese parlor by the host and hostess of the evening and their guest of honor, Mrs. Bishop wearing a corn-colored organdle over white silk. An artistic musical programme was rendered with splendid skill by the Misses Keickoefer, who spent their early childhood in this city, and who, at present, reside in New York, where they took up their residence after completing their studies abroad. As children, they were frequently heard in concert here and their years of study have made them masters of their various instruments, Miss Marie Kleckoefer playing last night on both the 'cello and banjo, Miss Bernadine on the piano, and Miss Anna on the violin. A vegetarian collation was served in the on the piano, and Miss Anna on the violin. A vegetarian collation was served in the dining room of the Cairo, which was decorated with pink and white flowers and paims. A COLONIAL EXPOSITION.

America to Be Handsomely Fentured at Omaha.

Dr. George L. Miller, President of the Greater America Exposition, is in the city in connection with the exposition enterprise, which he explained very lucidly last night to a reporter, as follows:

"It is well known to the people of the country that last year, under circumstances of great difficulty, the people of Omaha and the State of Nebraska determined to create an exposition that should represent the interests of the Central West, known as the Trans-Mississippi Exposition, held at Omaha. The success of this exposition so far surpassed anything that the people an-ticipated that it is still a matter of sur-prise to the country at large. "President McKiniey and the members

"President McKinley and the members of his Cabinet who visited the exposition were simply astounded at the expertion were simply astounded at the expert and intelligence manifest in its conduct, and the results which were accomplished in so short a time. It closed in November of last year with a financial success unprecedented in the history of industrial expositions in this or any other country. It not only paid dollar for dollar for the stock issued, amounting to millions, but stock issued, amounting to millions, but has a handsome surplus to meet any lia-bilities that may arise from the claims of discontented concessionaires or others.

"At the close of this exposition a serious problem arose as to the disposition a serious problem arose as to the disposition of the handsome buildings that had been erected. It seemed to hurt the people of Omaha to think of seeing those buildings de-stroyed, with all their architectural beauty, and a few enterprising men of the city formed a corporation and made a proposition to purchase all the buildings, logether with all that remained of the lenberger yesterday and discussed details of the change in schedule to be arranged prior to the quadrennial weighing of mails.
